2. The political parties cannot register simultaneously in a same electoral process, more than sixty candidates for federal representatives for plurality and for proportional representation divided on their five regional lists.
3. The political parties cannot register simultaneously in a same electoral process, more than six candidates for senator for plurality and for proportional representation.

THIRD TITLE
Election of the President from the United Mexican States and the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives

FIRST CHAPTER
Electoral systems

Article 9
1. The exercising of the Executive Power is placed in only one person, who is called The President of the United Mexican States elected each six years by plurality and direct vote of the Mexican citizens.

Article 10
1. The Legislative Power of the Mexican United States is placed in a General Congress, which will be divided in two Chambers, one of Representatives and other one of Senators.

Article 11
1. The House of Representatives is composed by 300 elected representatives according to the principle of majority voting, by means of the uninominal electoral district system, and 200 representatives that will be elected in accordance to the principle of proportional representation, by means of the voted regional list system in plurinominal districts. The House of Representatives will be totally reformed each three years.
2. The Senators' House will be composed by 128 senators, which, in each State and Distrito Federal, two will be elected according to the principle of majority voting, and one will be assigned to the largest minority. The rest of the 32 senators will be elected by the principle of proportional representation, voted in only one national plurinominal district. The Senators' House will be totally reformed each six years.
3. For each federative entity, the political parties should register a list with two Set of senators candidates. The senate of largest minority will be assigned to the set of candidates that head the list of the political party that has the second place of vote numbers on the entity. Also they should register a national list of 32 set of candidates to be voted by the principle of proportional representation.
4. On the lists mentioned in the previous paragraph, the political parties will assign the order of the set of the candidates.

SECOND CHAPTER
Proportional representation for the integration of the Representatives and Senators' Houses and the allocation methods

Article 12
1. For the implementation of the faction II of the article 54 of the Constitution, it is understood as casted total voting, the total of all the votes placed on the ballot box.
2. On the implementation of the faction III of the article 54 of the Constitution, for the representatives assignation of proportional representation, it will be understood as casted national voting, the one that will result by deducting from the casted total voting, the votes in favour of the political parties that have not get the two percent and the null votes.
3. Not any political party could have more than three hundred representatives in both principles. In not any case, a political party could have a number of representatives in both principles which represent a percentage of the total of the Chamber which exceeds eight points from the percentage of the casted national voting. This base will not be applied to the political parties that because of their victories in uninominal districts, obtain a percentage of seats in parliament from the total of the Chamber, higher to the addition of the percentage of the casted national voting plus the eight percent.

Article 13

1. For the assignation of representatives of proportional representation according to the faction III of the article 54 of the Constitution, it will proceed an application of a pure proportionality formula integrated by the following elements:
   a) Natural Quotient; and
   b) Higher Reminder

2. Natural Quotient: is the result of dividing the casted national voting by the two hundred representatives of proportional representation.

3. Higher Reminder of votes: Is the highest amount between the rest of the voting of each political party, once the allocation of seats in parliament is done by the natural quotient. The higher reminder will be used when there were still positions to distribute.

Article 14

1. Once it is developed the mentioned formula on the previous article, it will be observed the following procedure:
   a) It will be decided the representatives that will be assigned to each political party, according to the number of times that its voting has the natural quotient; and
   b) The ones that will be distributed by higher reminder if after applying the natural quotient were still remaining positions to assign, following the descending order of the votes not used, for each one of the political parties on the seats in parliament distribution.

2. It will be decided if it is necessary to apply to a political party the established limits on the factions IV and V of the article 54 of the Constitution, so the political party which the representatives number in both principles exceeds from three hundred or its percentage of seats in parliament of the total of the Chamber exceeds by eight points from its percentage of the national voting, it will be deducted the number of proportional representation representatives until they meet the established limits, the exceeding positions will be allocated to the other political parties that are not located on these ones previously mentioned.

3. Once it has been deducted the exceeding number of proportional representation representatives, to the political party according to the ones mentioned on the previous paragraph 2, it will be assigned to them the corresponding seats in parliament of each district, on the following terms:
   a) It will be obtained the distribution quotient, which results dividing the total of votes of the political party mentioned, by the positions to be assigned to the same political party.
   b) The obtained votes by the political party in each electoral district will be divided by the distribution quotient, assigned according to the number of seats in parliament of each one of them; and
   c) If there were still representatives to be assigned, it will be used the higher reminder procedure, mentioned on the previous article.

Article 15

1. For the assignation of proportional representation representatives in case it happens as the mentioned condition in faction VI of the article 54 of the Constitution, we will proceed as follows:
   a) Once the distribution mentioned in the previous article is done, it will be assigned the rest of the seats in parliament to the other political parties with the right for this, on the following terms:
      i. It will be obtained the effective national voting. For this it will be deducted from the casted national voting from the political parties to which could have been applied some of the established limits on the factions IV or V from the article 54 of the Constitution;
II. The effective national voting will be divided by the number of seats of parliament to be assigned, to obtain a new natural quotient;

III. The effective national voting obtained by each political party will be divided by the new natural quotient. The result will be the total of representatives to be assigned to each political party; and

IV. If there were still seats of parliaments to be distributed, they will be assigned according to the higher reminders of the political parties.

2. To assign the representatives to each political party, by plurinominal electoral district, it will proceed as follows:
   a) It will be obtained the effective voting by electoral district, which will be the result of deducting the voting of the political parties that are located in the mentioned conditions on the factions IV and V of the article 54 constitutional, in each one of the electoral districts.
   b) The effective voting by electoral districts will be divided by the number of seats of parliament pending to be assigned in each plurinominal electoral district to obtain the distribution quotient on each one of them;
   c) The effective voting of each political party in each one of the plurinominal electoral district will be divided by the distribution quotient, being the result in whole numbers the total of representatives to be assigned in each plurinominal electoral district; and
   d) If after applied the distribution quotient some representatives were left to be distributed to the political parties, it will be used the higher reminder of votes that each political party had on the electoral districts, until they were finished, in descending order, so each plurinominal electoral district had forty representations.

Article 16
1. Determined the assignment of representatives to the political parties as referred in the section a) and b) of the paragraph 1 from the article 14 of this Code and in case any of the political parties could be placed on the conditions from factions IV and V of article 54 of the Constitution, the procedure is as follows:
   a) It will be divided the total voting of each electoral district, by forty, to obtain the distribution quotient;
   b) The obtained voting by political party on each one of the plurinominal electoral districts will be divided by the distribution quotient, the result will be the total of representatives that will be assigned in each plurinominal electoral district; and
   c) If after applied the distribution quotient some representatives were left to be distributed to the political parties, it will be used the higher reminder of votes that each political party had on the electoral districts, until they were finished, in descending order, so each plurinominal electoral district had forty representations.

Article 17
1. In all the cases, for the assignation of the representatives by the principle of proportional representation it will be followed the order that the candidates had on the regional lists.

Article 18
1. For the assignation of senators by the principle of proportional representation referred on the second paragraph of the article 56 of the Constitution, it will be used the pure proportionality formula and will be followed the next rules:
   a) It is understood as casted total voting for the senators election by the principle of proportional representation, the total of all the votes placed on the ballot boxes for the list of national plurinominal electoral districts; and
   b) The assignation of senators by the principle of proportional representation will be done considering as casted national voting the one it results by deducting from the casted total, the votes in favour of the political parties that had not obtained the two percent of the casted voting for the corresponding list and the null votes.

2. The pure proportionality formula has the following elements:
   a) Natural Quotient; and
b) Higher reminder
3. Natural Quotient: is the result of dividing the casted national voting, between the number of elected senators to divide by the principle of proportional representation.
4. Higher reminder: is the highest amount from the rest of the voting of each political party after participating on the senators distribution by the natural quotient. The higher reminder should be used when there still were senators to be divided.
5. For the application of the formula, it will be observed the following procedure:
a) By the natural quotient it will be distributed to each political party the senators according to the number of times that their voting has the quotient; and
b) After applying the natural quotient, if there still were senators to be divided, these will be assigned by the higher reminder method, following the descending order from the rest of the not used votes for each one of the political parties.
6. In any case, in the senators assignation by the principle of proportional representation it will be followed the order that the candidates had in the national list.

THIRD CHAPTER
Complementary regulations

Article 19
1. The ordinary elections should be celebrated the first Sunday of July of the corresponding year, to elect:
a) Federal Representatives, each three years;
b) Senators, each six years; and

Article 20
1. When an election is declared as null or the winner members were ineligibles, the notice for an extraordinary election should be issued during the forty five following days after the end of the last stage of the electoral process.
2. In case of a vacancy of a member of the Mexican Congress of the Union elected by the principle of plurality, the Chamber will call to extraordinary elections.
3. The vacancy of members of the House of Representatives elected by the principle of proportional representation should be filled by the substitutes of the elected formula. If the vacancy is presented regarding the complete formula, it will be filled by the candidates formula of the same party that follows in the order of the regional list, after the corresponding representatives were assigned.
4. The vacancy of members of the Senators' House elected by the principle of proportional representation should be filled by the substitutes of the elected formula. If the vacancy is presented regarding the complete formula, it will be filled by the candidates formula of the same party that follows in the order of the regional list, after the corresponding senators were assigned.

Article 21
1. The announcement to celebrate extraordinary elections could not limit the rights that this Code recognizes to the Mexican citizens and to the national political parties, neither to change the procedures and the established formalities.
2. The General Council of the Federal Electoral Institute could adjust the established period in this Code according to the agreed date on the announcement.
3. In any case, could participate in ordinary and extraordinary elections the political party that had lost its registration previously to the date when they are done. However, it could participate in an extraordinary election the party that had lost its registration, as long as it had participated with a candidate on the cancelled ordinary election.
