Explanatory Note

On the Organic Law of Georgia 'on Changes to the Election Code of Georgia'

▪ Reason for the adoption of the organic draft law:

Adoption of the organic draft law of Georgia is determined by the ruling of 28 May 2015 of the Constitutional Court of Georgia. The Constitutional Court recognized the part of the Paragraph 1 of Article 110 of the organic law of Georgia "Election Code of Georgia", prescribing that for the regular elections of the Parliament of Georgia 10 majoritarian election districts shall be established in Tbilisi, incompatible with Article 14 and paragraph 1 of Article 28 of the Constitution of Georgia. As stated in the ruling of the Constitutional Court, "according to the information published by CEC, number of voters registered in 10 election districts of Tbilisi exceeds 1 million voters, while 3 613 851 voters are registered in election districts nationwide". Thus, approximately 28% of total number of voters are registered in 10 election districts of Tbilisi, and out of 73 mandates 10 mandates are distributed in Tbilisi, i.e. 14% of mandates. Respectively, in case there are 10 single-mandate majoritarian election districts in Tbilisi, it is impossible to establish 63 commensurate single-mandate election districts nationwide.

For visibility, see Annex 1, depicting current situation in election districts.

In its ruling, the Constitutional Court of Georgia emphasized the importance of equal voting power as an international standard and indicated that "equal voting power principle is a widely recognized international standard. For example, similar standards are envisaged by the European Commission for Democracy through Law (Venice Commission) in its recommendations. According to the Venice Commission 2002 "Election Code Provisions", equal voting power is one of the basic election principles, which seeks to establish the electoral districts in a manner as to distribute the respective mandates according to the number of voters. At the same time, deviation from the established norm should not exceed 10%, except for special cases (protection of densely populated national minorities, sparsely populated administrative unit). In such cases, deviation should not exceed 15%. Indications on equal voting power principle, related to the electoral law of Georgia, is included in recommendations of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) and the Venice Commission."

Therefore, since acting provisions of the Election Code of Georgia do not provide the principle of equal voting power, it became necessary to prepare changes to respective provisions of the election code for general elections of the Parliament of 2016 and the creation of the election districts based on the acceptable deviations indicated in the aforementioned ruling of the Constitutional Court.

▪ Content of the changes to the Election Code:

The Election Code envisages following changes:

For the election of the Parliament of Georgia, the ground for establishment of election districts will be equal distribution, to a feasible extent, of voters in constituencies, thus, bringing provisions of the Election Code in compliance with international standards.

For the regular elections of the Parliament of Georgia, majoritarian election districts will be set up in accordance with Article 110<sup>1</sup> of the Election Code. Consequently, the election district territories are defined by Article 110<sup>2</sup> of the Election Code, except for 4 cities, where it is envisaged to set up two or more election districts - the boundaries of election district in these cities shall be set by CEC.

It is worth noting that in Tbilisi, 22 instead of 10 elections districts shall be established. In 7 municipalities, one majoritarian election district each shall be set up. In the rest of Georgia, 44 election districts shall be established through unifying or, on the contrary, dividing municipalities, or through adjoining to municipality/municipalities local majoritarian district/districts of other municipality. The parts separated from municipalities shall be composed of local majoritarian election districts that were created for the last municipal elections conducted before the parliamentary elections.

As a result of such division, in 61 electoral districts the deviation in average voting power will be within a 10% range. In 12 electoral districts - it will be within a 15 % range.

For visibility, see Annex 2 that depicts new structure of election districts and number of voters.

Boundaries of single-mandate election districts will not be changed until the next regular elections, despite the possible changes in administrative boundaries of municipalities or voter migration. Boundaries of election districts can only be changed before the next regular elections, no later than June 1 of the regular elections and no sooner than December 1 of the previous year.

For establishment of single-mandate election districts latest data of electronic database of general voters lists, maintained by CEC, shall be used.

The existing 73 election districts have been kept, for they are also responsible for municipal elections. However, because election districts are to be set up through splitting the territory of a municipality, through adjoining the territories of municipalities or through adjoining one part of a territory of a municipality to the territory of another municipality, DEC operation areas are also to be determined in a different manner. Namely, for the next regular elections, a CEC ordinance will determine DECs, which shall have the full authority to conduct parliamentary elections in a single-mandate election district/districts, and their operation areas. In addition, CEC ordinance will determine the DECs, which, during the parliamentary elections, will be subordinate to the above-mentioned commissions and exercise auxiliary functions.
